

I feel there is too much violence for children. These are formative years, a time to impact children with hope and faith for their future, and the future of other people. They need to believe they can make a difference in the future. We need to provide them the positive influence, support, and tools to help them make choices that will benefit all of society, not model violent, reactive behaviors. We need to foster unity, values, and purpose in our youth. We could all stand to be encouraged with positive programing like "Chariots of Fire". Hallmark has produced alot of positive productions. We need to ask "What is the message we are sending to the children, who are our future?"